So far, "Broken Visions" by Jessica Sorensen is the best book out of the series! Plot thickens, emotions deepen and characters develop further in this paranormal story. I've enjoyed the characters throughout the "Shattered Promises" series. Sorensen gives us more to love in her third installment.

Broken glass vision in both eyes? My mom was at the store and she said that her eyesight suddenly changed, it looked like she was looking broken glass sort of like a kaleidoscope or prism effect. She said she started to feel "bad" (she is not too smart so that's the best description she gave me), then a few minutes later she said she started to ...

Broken Visions (2014) About book: I have loved this series from the very beginning. I'm not sure if the story changed or I have since the last book that I read. Gemma got on my nerves. I get that this story is mostly about Gemma and her growth through this whole series but I remember liking her in the first couple of books.

A reflexive saccade is triggered exogenously by the appearance of a peripheral stimulus, or by the disappearance of a fixation stimulus. A scanning saccade is triggered endogenously for the purpose of exploring the visual environment. In an antisaccade, the eyes move away from the visual onset. They are more delayed than visually guided saccades, and observers often make erroneous saccades in the wrong direction.

Just wondering if what you experienced was an ocular migraine? I'm not sure I understand the "broken glass" effect. If you perhaps were experiencing a zigzag light in your peripheral vision which lasted a short amount of time (I get the ocular migraines with the zigzag light lasting about 40 minutes or so.) it may be nothing more than an ocular migraine.
