Middle School Book Club Guide

What is a book club? Simply put, a book club is a group of readers, usually three or four, who read books roughly in sync with each other. Usually clubs read the same book, but sometimes clubs may read books by the same author, or read a series of books together that share a common genre—mystery, historical fiction, fantasy—or they may read a collection of disparate books with a common ...

How to Plan for Book Clubs in Middle School

Once a year we run our official book clubs here in 7th grade. Very early on in our book club experiences, students had many ideas for how to make them better; please let us choose our books, please let us choose who we are discussing with, please don't have us write in a packet. It wasn't that they didn't want to do book clubs, it was that they wanted to have meaningful conversations.

To meet this challenge, the authors suggest using Question-Answer Relationship (QAR) as a basis for school-wide comprehension instruction. QAR is an explicit and straightforward strategy that helps students identify questions as "in the book" or "in my head." It also provides a common language for teachers and students to discuss texts.
