The globe-like chandelier pictured above is called “Optical” (2007) and is made of hundreds of single optical lenses. Taken out of their normal context — that is, their frames — the individual lenses are reconfigured into a new object altogether. And looking at the chandelier from afar, one does not even make the connection.

To make this chandelier, I did recycle the flowers from the paper garland tutorial I shared this spring. This was not enough to finish the look but it did give me a good head start. I found a vintage wire basket for the frame of my paper chandelier and started stringing and hanging the long strands of blooms.

Am I the only one that loves the smell of new cardboard? Not quite like paper and not quite like wood, its scent evokes a sense of possibilities. I'm guessing Kayte, author of Paper Made, knows exactly what I'm talking about, for she created this so-cool chandelier of that very lowly material. She tells us it takes some careful cutting but virtually no money to create. We love that! Here's ...
